Chicago, July 24.—"Is that all?"

Agonized and baffled, that cry from the throats of hundreds whose dear ones had been snatched from them by the cinking of the Eastland, was all that marked the end of the tortuous and corpse lined journey through Chicago morgues to-night.

Hundreds of men was so with the Athens despatches said. there was a sudden lurch and they were all thrown into the suction of the swirl-

MANY GO INSANE.

Even Rescuers' Minds Give Way Hefore Horrors of Disaster. Chicago, July 24.—One of the agonizing features of the Eastland horror is the number of persons made insane by their experiences or the loss of relatives.

Women dragged from the river apparently uninjured became raving maniacs. Men who went into the hold to bring out bodies lost their reason and were dragged out babbling and crying from the terrors they had witnessed. In the morgues and rescue stations men and women raved and called for those who could not hear them.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—Denunciabermitting Dr. Allen M. Thomas, a physician of 35 West Fifty-fourth street, to adopt John Lansing Miner, 15, and call him John Allen Miner Thomas.

The boy is the son of the late Henry C. Miner, the theatrical man, and his second wife, Anne O'Neill Miner, once a noted actress, now the wife of Dr. Thomas. He was bogn six weeks before the death of his father in 1960. Mr. Miner embraced the Catholic faith to wed Anne O'Neill. He left his widow a fortune.

In the petition for adoption Mrs. Thomas supplements her husband's an enviable reputation in his profession and it is our intention that our son shall also become a physician, and as such I desire him to have the advantage of bearing the name of his stepfather."

PATHETIC SCENES

AT THE HOSPITALS

"'It's a damned shame to crowd all those people on one boat,' I said to the ticket taker at the gangplank.

"'Oh, I don't think so,' replied the ticket taker. There are not really 1,000 people on board, but those that are are all on deck, and that's why it looks so crowded."

"A moment later I heard the order given: 'Get all on this boat you can The others will be overcrowded, and we don't want to leave anybody.'

"It was almost immediately after this that I observed that the boat was starding to list. Mr. Hyatt, who was standing on the side of the vessur shanding on th ment of Chicago's penitence for the great froquois Theatre fire—until then the great froquois Theatre fire—until then the greatest horror the city had ever known—proved its worth in caring for the victims of to-day's disaster.

Scores of lives were saved because of the hospital's facilities for giving quick relief. Air was pumped back into the langs congested with water, and, before the day was ever, hundreds of victims had been passed through the hospital was perfectly to their homes.

Among the first of the rescued to be brought to the hospital were a mother and her twin baby boys. She was too hysterical to give her name, but from lier means the attendants gathered that her husband had been drowned.

A boy, apparently about 3 years old, and his baby sister also were brought in still alive The boy said his name was Hansen. The attendants believed that their parents may have been drowned.

One of the most pitfful sights accompanying the rescue work was the lifting of the unconscious form of a mother, in whose arms was her five-months'-old baby, tightly clasped to her breast. The baby was dead with a smile on its little face, but attendant physicians had hope for the mother. All resuscitation was in vain, however, and the mother was laid by her little one, awaiting identification.
